

ASC 326 Current Expected Credit Losses

The new credit loss standard (CECL) requires companies to estimate expected credit losses on their financial instruments over the entire life of the asset. The standard impacts many areas of an organization beyond just accounting and often presents more challenges than management teams anticipate. Finance systems, business processes, operations, and financial reporting all need to be carefully considered.

Riveron helps clients simplify the adoption process and create sustainable solutions. We provide more than just a set of recommendations — we become an extension of management to ensure the implementation is practical and tailored to your business needs.

Common Client Challenges

- ▶ Poor availability of historical loss data
- ▶ Identification of in-scope financial assets
- ▶ Limited resources and technical experience
- ▶ Imminent deadlines
- ▶ Complexity of model development, forecasts, and assumptions

CECL Services:

- ▶ Impact assessment
- ▶ Project management
- ▶ Data abstraction
- ▶ Accounting policy and methodology development
- ▶ Prepare required financial statement disclosures
- ▶ Business process design
- ▶ Internal controls development and testing
- ▶ Training and education
- ▶ Model development and validation

ACCOUNTING ADVISORY CURRENT EXPECTED CREDIT LOSSES
